EVELYN NESBIT THAW A WITNESS

On Stand for More than an Hour in Supreme Court at White Plains

SHOWED THE SAME GIRLISHNESS

That Won Sympathy for Her while Testifying Before in the Two Trials of Her Husband-Prosecutor Unable to Get Her to Admit that Harry Had Threatened Her Life During a Visit to Matteawan.

White Plains, N. Y., July 12.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, as pretty as ever, petulant and school-girlish, and dressed in the familiar blue which she wore so much during the two trials of her husband, Harry K. Thaw, for the murder of Stanford White, was on the stand for more than an hour before Justice Mills, in the supreme court here today, subpoenaed by the state in its fight to keep Thaw in the asylum for the criminal insane at Matteawan.

VOL. LI.-NO. 166.

Seemed a Little More Mature. But for the absence of the dainty Eton collar, she appeared much the same as she did when Jerome was trying to send Harry Thaw to the electric chair. She is a little more mature, perhaps, but she showed the same girlishness that won sympathy for her while testifying heretofore, and at times she was netulent to the extent.

es she was petulant to the extent Will Appear Again Today.

And though called by the state in an endeavor to prove Harry Thaw irrational, what Roger Clarke, the deputy attorney general, drew from her hps today, created rather a favorable impression for her husband. She was excused from the stand shortly after four o'clock, but was re-subpoensed by the state and she will probably appear again tomorrow.

State's Fight Largely Rests on Her Testimony.

Or go to jail. My husband is not paying me anything now, and I haven' money enough to hire counsel."

Upon the ultimate outcome of Evelyn Thaw's testimony the state's fight largely rests. Mr. Clarke tried hard today to get her to admit that Thaw had threatened her life when she visited him on one occasion after his commitment to Matteawan. But, turning appealingly to the court, she repeatedly refused to answer his question, and after a clash between counsel, Justice Mills ruled that he would hold the conversation in which the threat was supposed to have been made, a confidential one between husband and wife, and therefore privileged, until the state presented proof to show that Daniel O'Reilly, the New York lawyer, who was present at the Upon the ultimate outcome of Eve-

The constitutionalist forces, the advance of which on Teheran for a time was not considered serious, are now in possession of the greater part of the city, which they entered this morning without encountering any organized resistance.

While Sardarasad and Sipa-hadar, the leaders in the movement, concentrated the attention of the royalists by demonstrations to the west, a strong body of nationalists and bakhtlaris made their way unnoticed around to the north, from which point the capture of the capital was not difficult. The guards at the northern gates were disarmed and the invaders marched in, the foreign section leaders taking up their quarters in the old Mejliss building. Mr. Fuller of Tolland said that last Christmas he chanced to be in a certain city of the state and witnessed disgraceful drunkenness. He resolved that if ever the opportunity came to him to vote to close all saloons on Christmas he should do so and the opportunity has now arrived.

Mr. Loos stated that it is a well known fact that Christmas day is the quietest day of the year in the saloon business of all the 365 days, and that many closed on that day anyway, but that he did not believe that all saloon keepers should be obliged to close on that day.

"It is clearly to public interest that those desiring an opportunity to make a purchase in a saloon on that day be allowed to do so and that they be not denied this privilege."

Mr. Burnes of Greenwich was heartily in favor of the bill and suggested that when Christmas comes on Sunday the saloons close on Monday.

The matter was temporarily tabled to admit of this and later was passed. A strong effort will be made to defeat the bill in the senate.
